

- Correspondent*, conducted by M. Stover, i. 315.
- Corsin, General, Governor of Antibes, prisoners taken by, iv. 59.
- Corvinus, Mathias, distich of, i. 99.
- Corvisart, M., physician to NapoJeon, ii. 83; his advice to M. Bourrienne, 128; his visit to him, 289; opinion of M. Staps, iii. 180.
- Cossacks take possession of Hamburg, iii. 280.
- Coster St. Victor, M., defence of, ii. 282; sentenced to death, 286.
- Council, The, vote on the hereditary succession, ii. 261.
- Council of Ancients, decree of, i. 242; their address to the French people, 243; sitting of, 246; letter from Barras to, 249.
- Council of Five Hundred, appoints Lucien Bonaparte president, i. 235; agitated state of, 249; letter transmitted to, 250; violent proceedings of, against Napoleon, 251; dissolved by him, 253; remodelled, 255; decree of the new council, 256; nominates three Consuls, ib.
- Courant, M., sent with overtures to General Pichegru, i. 71; reports the Prince of Conde's remarks to General Pichegru, 74.
- Craonne, battle of, iii. 341.
- Crawford, Mr., English Minister at Hamburg, i. 350.
- Croisier, his grief at Napoleon's treatment of him, i. 140; suppresses an insurrection of the Arabs, 161; sent to prevent the massacre at Jaffa, 176.
- CrusBol, Due de, proclaims the Bourbons, iii. 354.
- Cure'e, M., proposes to make Bonaparte Emperor, ii. 261; his motion on the hereditary succession, 264, n.
- Cuvier, his useful labors, ii. 198.
- Cuxhaven, landing of the English at, iii. 165.
- Czernischefe, M., his intrigues, iii. 230; disguises his intentions, 231.
- Dalberg, Duo, member of the Provisional Government, iii. 361.
- D'Allemagne, General, his bravery at the battle of Austerlitz, iii. 6.
- Dalmatia, Duke, see Soult.
- Damas, Colonel, commander of the fortress of Hamburg, iii. 164.
- Dampierre, M. Montarby de, transferred to the Military College at Paris, i. 10.
- Dandolo, M., Proveditore-General in Dalmatia, i. 59.
- Dantzic, siege of, iv. 16.
- , Duke of, see Lefebvre.

Daru, M., Comrm&gt;sary-in-chief, levies collected by, iii. 93. Daubenton, M., Bonaparte's visit to, i. 300. Dautancourt, Captain, reads the Due d'En-ghieu's sentence, ii. 233. Davoust, Marshal, Duke of Auerstadt and Prince of Eckmuhl, one of the directors of the secret police, i. 328; his interview with Napoleon, ii. 59; commands a division at Boulogne, 228; created a Marshal, 266; anecdote of, iii. 63; created Prince of Eckmuhl, 166; appointed Go vena or-General of Hamburg, 225; his intrigue against M. Bourrienne, 227; President of the Government Committee in Hamburg, 248; only an instrument in the oppression of the Hanse Towns, 249, n.; invades Swedish Pomerania, 261; promised the Vice-royalty of Poland, 265; unites his army with that of General Vandamme, 284; his conference with the Hamburg deputies, 285; fortifies Hamburg, 316; banishes the inhabitants, 317; defence of his action in taking funds in order to provide for his army, 319, n.; refuses to believe the Emperor Napoleon's abdication, iv. 16; departs from Hamburg, 17; in ignorance of the Restoration, iv. 17, n.; order for his arrest, 79; appointed Minister of War, 102; letter to, from Fouche', 209; his letter to General Becker, 210; refuses to sign it, ib., n.; last decade of his career, 274 et seq. Decazes, M., Prefect of Police, iv. 231. Decre"s, takes his old post (Ministry of Marine) under Bourbons, iv. 296. Deferment, M., his intimacy with Napoleon, i. 266. Defeu, M., taken prisoner, i. 346; Napoleon's clemency to, 347; set at liberty, ib. Delaforet, M., his transactions with Napoleon, i. 398; reforms in the Post-office department after his removal, 398, n.	Demerville, M., his conspiracy, ii. 20. Denmark, King of, receives a challenge from Paul I., i. 315; his letter to the Duke of Mecklenburg, iii. 184. Denon, M., erects a monument to commemorate the battle of Marengo, ii. 350, n.; searches for the remains of General De-saix, ib., n.; the Pope's friendship for, iii. 255. Desaix, General, his intimacy with Bonaparte, i. 76; sent to organize Egyptian expedition, «&amp;., n.; his letter to, 117; sent to Damanhour, 136; his complaints to Bonaparte, ib.; mistake of his division, 139; marches in pursuit of Mourad Bey,
---	---